

“There will be consequences for Muslims in the south.”

Residents of a Sudanese border town fear they will be on the frontline of any post-referendum violence

عربي

News In Depth Programmes Video Blogs Business Weather

asia-pacific

Demand grows for Chinese fake art

Consumers' interest in fine European art creates a booming reproduction industry.

Last Modified: 30 Aug 2010 06:27

Email Article Print Article Share Article Send Feedback

China's wealthy elite have for many years developed a taste for Western food, wine and culture.

The demand for recreations of classical European works of art has also been steadily rising.

The village of Dafen in southern China has become the centre of a big industry, with about 8,000 artists responsible for creating 60 per cent of the world's oil paintings.

But for the workers painting the fakes, it is all about bringing industrial efficiency to their art.

Al Jazeera's Harry Fawcett reports from Dafen.

Source: Al Jazeera

Email Article Print Article Share Article Send Feedback

Topics in this article

People

■ Harry Fawcett

Country

■ China

Featured on Al Jazeera

Top News

- China 'backs Korean reunification'
- Medvedev warns of new arms race
- Olympic body to probe Fifa claims
- UK students rally against fee hikes
- Corruption monitor upsets Pakistan

What's Hot

Viewed Emailed

- China 'backs Korean reunification'
- What will the Arab public think?
- Medvedev warns of new arms race
- Nuclear dilemma: Israel vs. Iran
- Pakistani sues US over drone strike
- The world of WikiLeaks
- South Sudan braces for trouble
- Are we living in the end times?
- Ecuador offers refuge to Assange
- Many killed in Morocco rains

